Boesky pleads guilty to only charge

Faces up to 5 years on securities charge

NEW YORK (AP) - Ivan Boesky, the millionaire stock speculator whose meteoric Wall Street career crashed in an insider trading scandal, pleaded guilty yesterday to one count of violating federal securities laws.

He faces penalties of up to five years in prison and a $250,000 fine when sentenced Aug. 21 by U.S. District Judge Morris Lasker.

Lasker, who has a reputation among defense attorneys as a fair judge but a lenient sentencer, cautioned Boesky that in view of the publicity surrounding the case and the sentencing practices of various judges at Manhattan federal court, "I want to talk turkey."

He then asked Boesky if he understood that it was in the judge's power to sentence him to the maximum. Boesky said he did.

The 50-year-old financier, looking subdued and exhausted, entered his plea in a courtroom packed with nearly 200 reporters, sketch artists, lawyers and other defendants.

He was released without bail and, flanked by his two lawyers, left the courthouse through a side door without comment. Photographers swarmed around the black limousine that whisked him away.

The Securities and Exchange Commission announced on Nov. 14 that Boesky had settled charges that he engaged in illegal insider trading, or the illegal use of non-public information to profit from securities trades.

BOESKY, WHO had been the leading speculator in stocks of companies that were potential takeover targets, settled the charges by paying the government $100 million. He also agreed to cooperate with the continuing investigation into stock trading improprieties and agreed to plead guilty to a criminal charge which was left unspecified until yesterday.

The count to which he pleaded guilty charged him with conspiring to make false statements to the SEC.

He admitted to conspiring with others, who were not identified, to file a false registration statement with respect to purchases of stock in the Fischbach Corp. in 1984.

The registration statement, known as a Schedule 13D, must be filed with the SEC when an individual or an entity acquires at least 5 percent of a company's stock.

According to federal officials, Boesky began to

Pikes to host party Saturday

Fraternity got F permit last year

by Cathy Hoehn
staff reporter

Although the Theta Chi fraternity recently was unable to get an F-1 permit to sell beer at their proposed Theta Fest, Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity obtained their permit last year, and are thus able to hold their Pike Fest tomorrow.

Pi Kappa Alpha president Joe Domabyl said the fraternity went through "a lot of hassles last year" to receive their permit, so this year they needed only to submit a written application to City Council designating their exact plans for the party.

Fraternity secretary Eric Krause said the positive results of last year's big party aided in their ability to put on a repeat performance this year.

"It was a well-controlled, well-run party," said Jon Lunde, chairman of Pike Fest.

Other factors also helped them in their appeal to City Council.

Two police officers will be stationed at the door to help maintain control, and all of the fraternity members will wear security shirts and will monitor the party.

Domabyl said this should help prevent "any little fights that might occur."

The fraternity also has 15 designated drivers available to drive any guests home.

"It's a very organized, responsible party," Krause said.

Both Krause and Bill Higham, co-chairman of the Theta Fest committee, believe that the locations of the two parties were a factor in Pi Kappa Alpha being able to keep its permit while Theta Chi was not.

The Theta Chi house is located in a permanent resident area, inhabited mainly by townspeople.

"The question can be answered in one word: neighbors. It's as simple as that," Higham said.

Another factor against Theta Fest is its Main Street location, which Council members believed would be too dangerous considering the business in the area, Higham said.

Krause said since the Pi Kappa Alpha house is located in a mainly student-populated area, police do not have to worry as much about complaints of disturbances.

Many area residents aren't too concerned about the upcoming event.

"We've never had a problem," said Belinda Bienko, junior children's services major.

The only problem she has noticed has been guests taking up

Panel developing safety plan

Editor's note: This is the last part of a series about hazardous materials in our community.

by Caroline Langer
Friday editor

Because materials which pose a potential threat to public health and the environment pass through Wood County every day, and because of federal government regulations, the community is devising a plan to help cope with hazardous materials accidents.

Linda Holmes, of the Wood County Prosecutor's office, explained that the Superfund Reauthorization Act (SARA) of 1986 mandates that districts set up planning committees of elected officials and other people in the city.

The group has two years to outline evacuation routes and pinpoint waste generators, she said. Local governments have until August to set up such a committee and two years to devise an emergency-preparedness plan.

Hazardous waste:

What must be done?

Such a plan is necessary because of the hazardous materials carried by trains and trucks within county lines, Holmes said.

"One of the most important parts of the plan is how to notify people who will be affected by fumes or whatever, if there is a problem," she said.

Don Higgins, of the Ohio Environmental Protection Agency, said one part of emergency planning involves knowing what to do with people in the event of an evacuation.

"WHERE CAN they be housed - a church? high school gym? Does the Red Cross have enough hot dogs to feed them? Is there some form of entertainment so they don't fight amongst themselves, especially the young boys?" he asked.

Another part is finding out what dangerous substances are being used and produced by area industries and getting that information to the fire department, the local disaster services agency and the state emergency agency, Higgins said.

The idea is to enter the information into a computer so it can be easily accessed, and rescue workers will know where it is and what to do about it. The EPA has set aside money in its budget for such a system, he added.

Higgins said it was important for industries to work with rescue agencies and fully list this information for their own and their community's protection.

Substances stored underground or transported via pipeline must also be disclosed because "they shove some pretty interesting things underground," Higgins said. These

Junior workshop offered

If you are a junior, now's the time to start searching for your job after graduation.

To aid in the search, "Springboard: A Career Search Workshop," will be offered to University juniors Monday, April 27, in the Lenhart Grand Ballroom at 7 p.m.

Among the topics discussed will be learning how to start your job search this summer and the interview process. The workshop is being presented by the University Placement Services.

Portage party is cancelled

Plans for a Springfest-style party slated for tomorrow at Portage Quarry have been dropped, according to Jeff Rice, quarry operator.

Rice said organizers believed that the English proficiency examination, scheduled from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. tomorrow, would restrict the number of students attending the event.

Rice added that since the "Daze of Rock" party would be scheduled at the same time as the planned event, they decided to cancel.

"With the outdoor party going on, we felt we would be stepping on some toes," Rice said.

Wastes endanger future

It's time for the powers that be to step back and take a hard look at the potential danger hazardous waste poses for future generations.

By the year 2000, nuclear power facilities in the United States will have produced 66,000 tons of high-level nuclear waste.

Bowling Green is 45 miles from the Davis-Besse nuclear facility, located in Port Clinton. This puts the city within a 50-mile danger zone if an accident were to occur.

While an accident would pose an immediate threat, the radioactive waste stored in fuel pools at Davis Besse will be a certain problem in the near future. The pool will reach capacity in 1995, according to federal storage regulations. Certain modifications are being considered to increase capacity, which would give the facility an additional four to 25 years of on-site storage.

But when is it going to stop? Increasing the storage space is just buying time. Something permanent has to be considered.

A salt bed in the Texas panhandle is being proposed as the nation's first nuclear waste repository.

However, this raises the issue of transporting hazardous waste - a common occurrence in Wood County with no safety guarantees.

According to Richard Brudzynski, an administrative law judge of the Ohio Hazardous Materials Facility, there has been an average of one accident a week involving dangerous substances in Wood County over the past five years. Included in this number are 36 priority one or two accidents, those which pose a threat to health and environment.

However, only those transports, both train and truck, which have more than 1,000 pounds of hazardous material are required by federal law to identify what they are carrying.

Any truck or train which carries any hazardous material should be required by law to identify what it is carrying. Even one pound of a hazardous material could cause damage.

The federal government should start worrying about the future. Nuclear power and hazardous wastes pose a serious threat to our existence.

Pitfalls of majority rule

by Walter Squire

A recent editorial attacked Kelly McCoy, USG president, for trying to get the BGSU Foundation to divest from South Africa without first seeing if the majority of students wished this to be done. We are taught since the beginning of school that majority rule is the best possible form of government. But this is only if the majority is always correct.

Alexis de Tocqueville devoted part of his book Democracy in America to the problem of a majority rule government. This section he called "The Tyranny of the Majority."

The majority is the ultimate authority in the United States. It decides who will fill the legislative, executive and judicial branches of our government, so that a person who has a dispute with the majority has one to turn to. In the words of de Tocqueville, "However iniquitous or absurd the measure of which you complain, you must submit to it as well as you can."

But the majority is merely a collective of individual opinions and can be compared to an individual whose opinions are no more important than another individual, who we may call the minority. So why do we always listen to the majority? This individual known as the majority holds absolute power and may misuse that power by wronging his adversaries, and the mere fact that this individual is comprised of more parts does not mean he will be any less likely to act this way.

On this matter, de Tocqueville says, "The power to do everything, which I should refuse to one of my equals I will never grant to any number of them."

The omnipotence of the majority may cause the minority to resort to physical retaliation, as was the case with Native Americans in the late 19th century, and again in the race riots in Detroit and Watts in the '60s. But even this does no good for the minority, as the majority now has proof of the evil nature of minorities.

The omnipotence of the majority was a threat to justice even in the early days of our nation. James Madison realized this and wrote the following in the Federalist Papers, No. 51: "It is of great importance in a republic, not only to guard the society against the oppression of its rulers, but to guard one part of the society against the injustice of the other part. . . . In a society under the forms of which the stronger faction can readily unite and oppress the weaker, anarchy may as truly be said to reign as in a state of nature where individual is not secured against the violence of the stronger . . ."

The rights of the majority include the right to command all people and the right to decide what laws, if any, will control the power of the majority. The latter is as flawed as Congress voting on their own pay raises. Just because one is of the majority opinion, one cannot be considered morally correct and honest. Morality, like insanity, is a relative term decided by the majority of a society.

The right of the majority to command dooms any citizen who refuses to obey an unjust law. That citizen is saying that the majority should not be able to decide right and wrong, for if they make one mistake, they could make more. This is intolerable in the eyes of the majority. Our whole government is based on the principle that the majority is always correct.

The moral power of the majority is based on the opinion that the interests of the many are preferable to those of the few. As was mentioned before, if it is the majority opinion that denying human rights to minorities is in the interests of the many, there is nothing stopping legislation to that effect. In essence, the Emancipation Proclamation changed nothing; those in the minority are enslaved to those of the 50 plus percent opinion.

The majority lives in a state of self-applause over this. If the majority is always correct, then if I am a member of the majority I am correct. This is dangerous as it easily slips into fascism. People will join the majority in order to be considered correct and to avoid persecution.

Another similarity between majority rule government and fascism is that the majority raises barriers against the liberty of opinion. If one offends the only authority present in such a government (the majority), he is considered a threat to the government and is punished.

Take for instance a writer who expresses an opinion contrary to the public opinion. Even if he is not denying the right of the majority to decide for all, he is saying the majority is incorrect on one matter, therefore the majority can be incorrect on other matters. The writer may be censured, and any holding the same opinion as the writer will not express that opinion for fear of persecution. One need only look at the HUAC trials of the '50s in which supposed Communists were blacklisted for several illustrations of this.

A government without tyranny operating under majority rule relies on the conscience and morality of the people making up the majority. Until a government can be set up in which the interests of all are taken into consideration, we have to elect moral and conscientious leaders and representatives.

I hope this is the reason why Kelly McCoy was elected USG president. I believe her decision that the BGSU Foundation should divest from South Africa is a moral and conscientious one. Her not polling for the popular opinion first is no reason why this divestment should not be carried out.

Squire is a sophomore writing major.

Letters

'I gave at the office - for four years!'

I just want to thank the Senior Challenge Executive Committee for the very entertaining literature they recently sent me.

As I chuckle and consider the different pledge levels, as suggested in the pamphlet, I am reminded of lousy cafeteria food that, as dorm residents, we were "sentenced" to buy, filthy dorms, lack of adequate parking, an inherently disorganized bureaucratic University system, unfriendly and hidden University officials (i.e. Who is that man Paul Olscamp who sent all the graduating seniors a letter about the prohibition of alcohol at graduation?) and above all, the astronomical tuition.

In fact, your pamphlet does everything except answer the question "What has the University given me as a student?" The answer is NOTHING!!!! With few examples, we, the students, have paid, and I might say quite handsomely, for everything we have received here at Bowling Green State University, including a "small" fee for our diploma.

As the Executive Committee takes us on the trip down "memory lane" in their pamphlet, must I remind them that most people paid to go to their first hockey game and paid to go to the freshman mixer at the Ice Arena.

So, as I "seriously" ponder what pledge level I wish to contribute, my possible "active status" in the Alumni Association if I do pledge, which I might add had been one of my "life-long goals" following graduation, and the promise by the Executive Committee that "as a donor, you will receive no other alumni solicitations during your Senior Challenge pledge period," I will come to the conclusion that I have already wasted enough time, energy and above all, MONEY here at this school.

However, I wish the Executive Committee the best of luck in their challenge. Maybe you will bring new meaning to the old saying "There's a sucker born every minute."

Forget the Utopian view of the '60s

I was struck by a bit of irony walking across the Union Oval the other day. On one side of me, people were busy setting up the '60s Expo.

On the other side lay the burnt remains of the divestment shanty. On one side, the remains of an attempt to enlighten this campus and the racist response to it, and on the other paisley icons divorced from meaning.

People today are looking back to a ridiculously idealized version of the 1960s, a cute "Happy Days" vision of the same period when Malcolm X, Martin Luther King Jr., John and Robert Kennedy were all assassinated for their views.

We are remembering a time symbolized today by Woodstock while we conveniently forget the stabbings at the Altamont concert.

The '60s were not a placid time when hippies sat around smoking pot and contemplating their navels. The '60s were, unfortunately, also the time when we sent thousands of young men across the sea to die in a war that, for all Sylvester Stallone's fantasies, we did not win.

I don't agree with the scrubbed-up version of the '60s being shown. If we want to remember and emulate that period, let's fight harder for the equality for all people that the '60s - and the divestment shanty - strove for.

Let's take off our paisley-colored glasses.

Freedom fighters deserve credit

In regard to Sue Pastor's criticism of the proposed contra fund-raiser (BG News, April 14), I must first state that under the Reagan administration, not one country has become a communist nation.

The strong Reagan doctrine against imperialistic Russia is for the express purpose of promoting democracy across the world.

Communism perpetuates a philosophy that places man as the supreme being, not God, in direct contradiction to one of the major principles on which our country was founded.

To support a group that is for a democratic government that includes the basic freedoms - speech, religion and the right to a free vote - in Nicaragua is by no means a bad thing.

The College Republicans feel that through this fund-raiser for the freedom fighters it will promote an interest in the affairs of South America. The war for freedom in our great country involved much bloodshed, but those who died for my freedom, I salute!

Someday those who died for the Democratic cause in Nicaragua will have the salute of their young who realize how great a sacrifice these freedom fighters have made to promote freedom!

When the 'Just Say No' fad spreads

by Scott Munn

In regard to drugs, I tried Mrs. Reagan's "Just say No" catch-all when it entered public domain awhile ago; such deceptively bold initiative seemed a miracle cure for my lack of decisiveness. I wanted to bear witness.

Not wishing to wait for the overtures of a dealer, I decided instead to seek one out. Finding Bryant Park was easy enough, and upon sidling up to the first shady character who presented himself it happened - "Sensimilla, coke . . ." he said shadily.

With visions of a proud First Lady backing me up, and heady with conviction, I decided to go Nancy one better: "F— you," I said, not too nastily it was hoped. I was making a point, not trying to hurt his feelings.

To my surprise he bared his teeth and threatened to "Cut you bad" as he put it. Not forgetting my manners, I thoughtfully edged backwards, navigating the block with a smile and a wave. He didn't wave back.

We can all benefit from this handy phrase

I blame my failure on a certain lack of communication, but don't wish to abandon the concept of "Just say No" entirely. Nor do these powerful three words belong solely on the lips and in the hearts of the herds of impressionable youth roaming our country: everybody can benefit, or, past-tense, could've if they had listened.

Some of the following examples tend to emphasize the importance of getting a receipt with your advice, especially when dealing with family.

□ Mr. Reagan, Iran, Nicaragua, and other places TWA doesn't fly to:
Bantam gulped up half of the Pacific Northwest putting out the Tower Commission Report. This sacrifice needn't have been. One assumes that the president could've "Just said No" to his advisers and spared the public the anguish of having to swallow what they've already eaten and digested; that Ron's a little foggy on particulars in general. And Lt. Colonels in particular.

□ Reykjavik, which is cold, hard to pronounce, and gone but not forgotten: The president, to his due, did utter the magic words here.

□ Regan - there but for the absence of an 'a' go I:

An unfair fight, as it would've been impolite to throw the First Lady's words back at her when they quarreled, quarrel covered by Time magazine or not.

□ Just desserts and the political shelf-life of Tutti Frutti:

If a majority of voters had "Just (said) No" at the polls 6½ years ago, well. . . .

□ The 65 mph speed limit which may once again be coming to a state near you:

A kind of 21st Amendment in its own right, and a recent example of enough people "Just (saying) No" to a law to make it not so anymore.

□ The pope's views on science and contraception, and other items which don't come as a surprise:

The mothering instinct is stronger than the technicality of infertility. Every "No" to the church's doctrine will need diapers.

□ Prophylactics in commercials, or, the medium is the message:

In a line-up of plots oozing "yes, yes" at every turn of the channel, it was refreshing for TV executives to hold out as long as they did by "Just (saying) No" to condom ads. I move that they abolish those self-serving Alcoholics Anonymous and "careful with the drinking" spots as well; they undermine those great beer commercials.

□ Urinalysis, or, what not to do at a party when the hostess is looking:

It follows that if everybody "Just (said) No" about what they're supposed to be saying no about in the first place, there wouldn't be a call for delving into such matters, and we could all go on to other mottos, such as "Just be good" and "Just Agree."

Munn, a former student at the University, is juggling an internship and an identity crisis in New York City.

3 get Shanklin Award

Grads recognized for work in research

by Kay Fisher
staff reporter

Three graduate students received the honor of the Shanklin Award last night, which is given to graduate students each year for their outstanding work in research.

The winners included Kathryn Robinson, graduate assistant in biological sciences; Bonnie Johnson, teaching fellow in English; and Ingeborg Hrabowy, graduate assistant in psychology. Each of the winners received $750.

The three runners-up were Yasmin Ranasinghe, graduate assistant in photochemical sciences; Duane Vorhees, Ph.D. fellow in history; and Loring Crepeau, graduate assistant in psychology. Each of the runners-up received $250.

Two graduate students from each of three separate divisions were chosen to compete for the award. The divisions included sciences and mathematics, arts and humanities, and social sciences and behavioral sciences.

Any graduate student who is registered at the University and is in good standing with all established requirements of the Graduate College is eligible to compete.

Bev Baker, Graduate Student Senate president three years ago, helped to establish the Shanklin Award in honor of Charles Shanklin, a 1951 graduate of the University and a Board of Trustees member for 15 years.

Shanklin, who attended last night's ceremony, said that the research presentations were very impressive, as they have been in previous years.

"Graduate research is the heartbeat of the University," Shanklin said. "The search for real new knowledge by graduate students is also the excitement of the University."

FINALISTS WERE chosen on the basis of a preliminary competition where abstracts from contestants were submitted to the executive council of the Graduate Student Senate.

Pat Olsen, GSS representative-at-large and chair of the honors committee, coordinated this year's event.

The abstracts were to state the significance of each person's research as well as the originality of the research and how it contributes new knowledge to the area of study.

A panel of nine judges composed of six members of the graduate faculty and three graduate students made the final decision at last night's ceremony.

things could leak out or otherwise endanger the community and environment.

Richard Brudzynski, administrative law judge of the Ohio Hazardous Materials Facility, said, "We don't know what to do unless we know what chemicals are in the area, who's got them, where the facilities are located, what the sensitive areas are and what to do about it."

It is mandated by the federal "Right to Know" law that industries disclose this information, he said. The facts then need to be handled so rescue workers can get to them and understand them.

WALLACE DENNIS, director of Wood County Disaster Services, said those involved in the farming industry were the "most flagrant" users of hazardous materials.

"We're a farming community and most farmers use insecticides and pesticides every day of the summer," he said. "These products are shipped in a concentrated form in barrels. It can burn skin and the fumes can paralyze if breathed. Yet farmers use them every day."

Another business using and producing hazardous materials is Cooper Industrial Products, 1175 N. Main St., which uses materials such as ammonia, solvents and polyurethane paints, which are not included in the EPA's "Acutely Toxic Chemicals" list, but could be dangerous if mixed, Dennis said.

"But we don't worry about it much because the chemicals are not allowed near each other; they are kept at separate parts of the line," he said. "There are no industries in Bowling Green which could cause a catastrophic spill."

"Our main concern is something that is passing through."

Dennis said it is possible to plan a remedy to a transportation accident.

The police, sheriff and the University's Public Safety de-route anywhere in Bowling Green because the direction to go depends on where the wind is blowing, Dennis said. People would be directed to seek shelter upwind of the accident.

Fire Chief Jack Gonyer said that in the event of a hazardous materials accident, the fire department would identify the

"We don't know what to do unless we know what chemicals are in the area, who's got them, where the facilities are located, what the sensitive areas are and what to do about it."

— Richard Brudzynski, administrative law judge of the Ohio Hazardous Materials Facility

partments could immediately organize an evacuation route upwind from the spill, and people in the private sector who are trained to clean up hazardous spills could begin that expensive process soon thereafter.

DENNIS SAID probably 85 percent of the people in Bowling Green could be notified of an accident through five outdoor warning sirens, the police and fire department's public announcement systems, the University's "call-down" system which causes all phones on campus to ring, a message on cable TV, the Emergency Broadcast System's announcement on regular television and radio, and telephone print-out messages, where available, for the deaf.

There is no set evacuation product and evacuate people within a one-to-two-mile radius, if necessary. It would then secure the area so no unauthorized people enter it, he said.

Until the disaster services agency arrives, the fire department would monitor the wind and follow other procedures outlined by the U.S. Department of Transportation's emergency handbook, Gonyer said.

Whether or not the department could fight a fire depends on what is burning, Gonyer said. Some chemicals react dangerously to water and would either have to be snuffed out with foam, left to burn themselves out or dealt with by experts with the proper equipment.

Stars shine in planetarium show

by Debbie Rogers
staff reporter

Stars and planets whiz by on the ceiling; pictures of ancient gods and places flash rapidly; and the booming voice of a narrator tells the story of time.

That is a scene from "It's About Time," the University planetarium's latest production.

Many people have seen the various planetarium shows and performances, but most do not realize that all the work is done in-house by a variety of students, said Dale Smith, planetarium director.

Smith said every University-produced show starts with an idea that many people can relate to and then that idea is developed into a whole show. Time is the subject Smith picked for spring.

"After the show a year ago ("Planet Quest"), I was scanning around for ideas," he said. "I was looking for something everyone has a handle on."

Smith said that he does not pick all his topics just from his imagination.

"I'll see what other planetariums are doing and draw ideas from that," he said. "Of course, I want to choose a topic of broad general interest."

The script for "It's About Time" was written by Smith. He said that it is hard to determine how many hours it actually took to write the script because ideas for the story can come at any time.

"Some (ideas) you're sitting thinking about, some while you're walking to work, some in the shower," he said. "The writing is a fairly fast process. It's tough to put a number of hours on it."

After the script is written, Smith said he starts to put together a crew to work on music, audio production, photography and narration. These different parts take a lot of time and energy to perfect, he said.

For example, photographs must be taken and made into slides. Next, all of the slides, home-produced music and narration must be set in time with the script.

According to Smith, one of the creative, important parts of "It's About Time" and any home-produced planetarium show, is the narration.

"You want different voices for quotations to spice it up," he said. "You need to have a male and female narrator for variation. Both (narrators) were people used to using their voices in an expressive way."

SMITH SAID that he uses all of the departments on campus for creating a planetarium show. A lot of cooperation exists between the art, music, technology and theater departments to make the performance a success, he said.

"There are lots of talented groups on campus that can be brought together," he said.

Randy Rygiel, junior English education major, said one problem she has encountered involves noisy guests leaving the party at late hours.

"But you get that whenever there's any party around here," she said.

One resident of the area said she has also been bothered in the past by loud noise.

"It's worse in the summer ... their doors are open and our windows are open," Gaye Schlagheck said.

Shelley Cook, junior technical writing major, believes this week may be a bad time for a party.

City Blotter

City police said an unknown person broke into the Mental Health Clinic, 1010 N. Prospect St., at about 11:30 p.m. Wednesday.

The man, who was wearing "gray work clothes," was seen by a clinic employee standing in the doorway of an office. He left when the employee saw him, police said.

The man may have gained entry through a window in the adjacent office of Dr. Beatty and Dr. Archer, optometrists, at 1022 N. Prospect St., police said. The window had been pried open, probably by a screwdriver or a tire iron, police said.

Nothing appeared to be missing in either office, police said.

The theft of about $700 in cash and checks from a money bag at Falcon House, 140 E. Wooster St., was reported to city police at 10:50 a.m. Wednesday. The theft occurred sometime Tuesday night, police said.

A vacant rental house was broken into at 530 S. Main St. sometime Tuesday night, police said. A police officer at the scene said the house had been entered forcefully and someone may have been staying there, but nothing appeared to be missing. The house is owned by Maurer and Green Rentals.

A Bell radar detector, value unknown, was stolen from a car parked at 512 Ridge St. sometime between 3:30 a.m. and 8 a.m. Wednesday, police said. Entry was gained by smashing the driver's-side window, police said.

A women's dark blue Fuji 10-speed bicycle was reported stolen from 137 Georgia Ave. Tuesday night, police said. The owner told police the bicycle, valued at $180, was stolen about two weeks before.

A University student reported the theft of a $2,000 silver Rolex watch.

Campus Blotter

The ex-boyfriend of a University student was charged yesterday with her abduction, which occurred Wednesday at 1:03 a.m. from Lot K near Kreischer Quadrangle, University police said.

She was found unharmed in Toledo by city and University of Toledo police. Craig Brown, who is a University of Toledo student, was charged with unlawful restraint.

Yesterday, the Compton Hall director notified University police that Brown was in the building at 12:05 a.m. Brown was told to leave the campus and not to return.

A roof on a vehicle parked in Lot 6 near the Intramural Fields was reported damaged Wednesday at noon. The complainant reported that the roof appeared to have been walked on sometime between midnight and noon. Damage was estimated at $200.

Several juveniles were harassed by a male in a truck while crossing Mercer Street at the Ice Arena on Wednesday at 12:35 p.m.

The driver accelerated his vehicle as the juveniles started to cross the street. No license or identification of the driver were obtained.

An unknown male tried to sell a stolen library book to the Student Book Exchange, 530 E. Wooster, Wednesday at 12:09 p.m. The sales clerk returned the book to the seller, a black male with a sweatshirt, and gave a description of him to University police.

The tires on a bicycle locked to Batchelder Hall racks were reported damaged Wednesday at 5:01 p.m.

The University student reported that unknown persons unsuccessfully tried to remove the bicycle. Tires were valued at $100.

Two area lawsuits filed

In the latest move in a child-custody case being tried in Wood County, a California woman has filed suit in U.S. District Court in Toledo against Wood County Prosecutor Betty Montgomery and the director of the Bowling Green Children's Resource Center.

Nancy Fuller, of Walnut Creek, Calif., filed suit against Montgomery for $3.2 million and against Dr. William Donnelly for $6 million.

The suit against Donnelly charges that he was responsible for having Fuller's child transferred from her custody to that of the father, William Grant of Bowling Green, against the best interests of the child.

The suit against Montgomery alleges that the prosecutor said she would stop all investigations into the child's welfare if Fuller continued to talk to the media about the case.

A Lucas County judge ordered March 12 that the child, now 5, be transferred to the temporary custody of the father. The child was "forcibly removed" from the mother's home on March 30 and returned to Grant's home, according to the suit.

Daniel Spittler, the Bowling Green attorney representing Fuller, filed a request yesterday in Wood County Common Pleas Court to withdraw as her attorney.

In an unrelated case, the husband of a Fostoria woman who died as a result of injuries sustained in a Sept. 8, 1986, auto accident is seeking more than $3 million in damages.

William Dauterman, of 307 N. Main St., Fostoria, filed suit April 13 in Wood County Common Pleas Court against Jamie Peatee, of 923 Wilson Court.

The Sixties: decade of change

To close the University celebration of 'Sixties Week,' the News will present a brief retrospective of the times.

Bruce Edwards

BG News/Rob Upton

by Mizell Stewart III
managing editor

The term "student" at the University did not always indicate "radical" during the '60s.

Campuses like Berkeley and the University of Michigan became famous for being hotbeds of liberalism and anti-war protest. The University was not isolated from this trend, but a University professor notes that the situation here during the decade was more relaxed.

Bruce Edwards, assistant professor of economics, said the current preoccupation with student apathy also existed years ago. "The stereotypical student of the last 50 years has exhibited an outlook of semi-informed apathy," he said. "They know a little more than the average person - but most of them don't care very much."

Edwards began teaching at the University in 1966. A self-proclaimed activist, he added that the mood of the nation, as well as the University, was more liberal than it is now. Both left and right-wing activism were prevalent at the University, particularly during the late '60s, Edwards said. "There was sort of a begrudging respect between the activists on the left and the right because at least they were trying to do something, regardless of the activity - or lack thereof - of the rest of the student body."

He said the number of people who were considered activists numbered around 30 percent. "You're kind of talking about a majority of a minority," he said. "The main thing was that students did not want to go to Vietnam."

"The intelligentsia was telling them that it was the right thing to do. It was a silly war ... and they didn't like the idea of being drafted to go someplace where many believed it was a mistake."

During this time, a rather unpopular feature of the News was its publication of the latest round of draft lottery numbers, which determined which men would be called up for military service.

"The student anti-war protesters were playing to the emotions of the people who were going to be shot, and they said it was sort of useless to go out and get killed," he said.

"This young lady was picketing in front of Moseley Hall saying 'Resist the draft! Stop the war in Vietnam!'" he said. Shortly after, she handed her picket sign off to a classmate and walked into the building.

Several days later, Edwards said, he saw the same student in the Union preparing to attend the University's Military Ball with an ROTC cadet.

"I asked her afterward why she picketed to stop the war and then went to the ball. She told me that she did not believe that going to the military ball had anything to do with protesting to stop the war in Vietnam. She didn't see anything wrong with it."

Edwards said students also protested the existence of ROTC on the University campus.

"At the time, I think the military people that were assigned to head up the ROTC were intelligent. You didn't have any people picking fights," he said.

McDonald split faculty

Controversy gave professors greater policy-making role

by Kate Foster
staff reporter

The 1960s was a time of rebirth for the University: birth of the faculty charter that exists today, a greater faculty and student voice in setting University policy. Yet in reminiscing about this time, faculty members also stress the long, bitter battle that preceded the 1960s, a battle that divided the faculty - a battle whose remnants still linger.

Between 1951 and 1961 the University followed the rules of one man whose name goes down in history both as the most despised and loved University president: Ralph McDonald.

Dictatorial, monarch-like and tragic are some of the terms faculty use when referring to McDonald's administration.

Some of the regulations he enforced included a strict dress code which forced female students out of class for wearing

— James Graham, professor of history pants, the prohibition of alcohol consumption by students even if they were in their own home. McDonald strongly opposed student demonstrations and even expelled a number of students from the University for protesting.

Faculty freedoms were likewise limited. A number of University duties which are dispersed amongst various committees today rested solely in the hands of McDonald during his reign.

He did the hiring, firing and salary setting of faculty staff and administration.

Some faculty remember his strong bias in promotions.

"He rewarded people arbitrarily. He acted like an absolute monarch. If he liked you, then 'bing,' you knew it," said James Graham, professor of history.

"People felt that faculty were given promotions and raises on the basis of favoritism and supporting or not supporting McDonald. He knew who his friends were," Joseph Perry, professor of sociology, said.

At the same time, McDonald's opponents and supporters alike recognize the positive things he initiated for the University. He improved the overall quality of the University, academic progress and salaries of the professors.

Virginia Platt, past history professor and present trustee, said McDonald's intense love for the University eventually became an obsession that proved detrimental to the University.

"He became so enamored with the University that he wanted it to be perfect. He became a dictator; it was a tragedy of academics," Platt said.

Perry remembers McDonald's demand for the highest caliber instructors to serve "his" university. While his high standards served to the betterment of the University, they ultimately resulted in a strong faculty opposition to his policies.

During the spring of 1961, McDonald fired a philosophy professor who had defended students' rights to demonstrate on campus. A group of faculty considered this the decisive move in McDonald's downfall.

Shortly after he fired the philosophy professor, more than 50 professors, including Platt and Perry, drew up a petition protesting his actions.

During that same year, McDonald promoted 93 faculty members for the purpose of - Platt and other faculty members speculate - gaining back faculty support. However, in June of 1961, McDonald resigned from his position of University president.

Ralph Harshman acted as president for the next two years and was replaced by William Jerome in 1963. Jerome remained at the University until 1973.

After McDonald resigned, a "faculty revolution" emerged. A group of more than 50 faculty, including Platt and Perry, created a charter giving faculty a voice in setting University policy they never had been afforded under McDonald or previous administrations.

But McDonald supporters continued to be divided from those who had opposed them through the '60s and today.

"It was a bitter and tense fight and it lasted a long time. Some people who had been dear friends never spoke again," Perry said.

"The people who made the revolution created the foundation of the kind of University that exists today. The University wouldn't be nearly as liberal and conducive to education as it is today," Graham said.

Senators warn airlines to upgrade services

WASHINGTON (AP) - A string of senators warned airlines yesterday to shape up, improve services and cut delays or face possible re-regulation or heavy government-imposed penalties for shoddy operations.

"The airline industry in its zeal for competition has gone absolutely hog-wild," declared Sen. J. James Exon, D-Neb., during a hearing where senior executives from three major airlines acknowledged a consumer backlash because of the rising number of delays and other complaints.

The executives from American Airlines, Continental Airlines and Delta Air Lines told the Senate panel they are prepared to make on-time flight information and other consumer information available to travelers if other air carriers are required to do the same.

Robert Crandall, chairman of American Airlines, said he would agree to put the information into the airline-owned SABRE computer reservation system, which is widely used by travel agents. Delta and Continental suggested a periodic reporting of the information to the Transportation Department.

The federal government, which once kept on-time statistics, has not done so in years as part of the overall move by the Reagan administration to reduce government paperwork. No airline has offered to supply the information independently for fear of being put at a competitive disadvantage.

"CONSUMERS DO NOT currently have the information they need to make meaningful choices" about competing airline services, acknowledged Thomas Plaskett, president and chief executive officer of Continental Airlines. Continental has been cited as a leading target of traveler complaints.

But Plaskett, Crandall and Murph Dullum, vice president for government affairs for Delta, said that if consumer information is made available by all airlines, the competitive marketplace - and not government edict - will improve airline service. Airline delays increased by about 25 percent last year and the delay problem has continued into 1987. Complaints about airline service to the Transportation Department have soared in recent months.

The cries about poor delays, lost baggage and poor flight selections have been loud in Congress as well, prompting the introduction of a flurry of airline passenger protection legislation, most of which would require increased disclosure of consumer information by the air carriers.

Bills may ease prison crowding

COLUMBUS (AP) - For the second time this week, the Ohio House approved legislation yesterday that could facilitate the release of certain inmates in a bid to ease the state's overcrowded prison population.

But Rep. C.J. McLin, D-Dayton, ran into inmate "coddling" charges with his proposal letting more prisoners take advantage of so-called good time programs under which they can earn reduced sentences with good behavior.

On Tuesday, McLin won passage of a companion measure that lets prison officials in emergency situations release certain prisoners serving time for less serious offenses and nearing the end of their terms.

Both bills were recommended by the Governor's Committee on Prison Overcrowding, which says the penal system, with about 22,800 inmates, has swelled to 150 percent of capacity and will become more crowded despite a $636 million, long-range construction program now under way.

McLin's good time bill, after a flurry of debate, went to the Senate 62-25 as the House wrapped up work for the week and adjourned until Tuesday. The Senate, in recess this week except for some committees, also reconvenes that day.

REP. RUSS Guerra Jr., R-Englewood, who voted for the emergency release bill, told colleagues that McLin's proposal goes too far. If the House continues to pass such bills, he charged, "We not only will ease overcrowding, we will vacate the premises."

Reps. Robert Netzley, R-Laura, and Steven Williams, R-Lancaster, sounded similar warnings. Netzley said, "This philosophy is wrong. We are coddling prisoners. The easier we make it on them, the more recidivism we are going to have."

However, McLin, who has served as chairman of the state's Prison Inspection Committee, said opponents were overreacting because his bill only reduces the time before a prisoner's initial appearance before the Parole Board. "Most of them are not released after their first hearing anyway," he said.

Under present law, inmates of state reformatories can earn up to 12 days of good time a month, and prisoners in adult institutions can qualify for eight days a month.

The bill generally would apply the eight-day maximum to both, although it empowers the Department of Rehabilitation and Correction to adopt new ways to earn additional days.

Bongard to testify against Warner

CINCINNATI (AP) - Burton Bongard, a former Home State Savings Bank president convicted of state charges in the thrift's collapse, has agreed to plead guilty to federal charges and testify against former Home State owner Marvin Warner.

U.S. Attorney D. Michael Crites announced the plea bargain yesterday, saying it would help in prosecuting Warner during the federal trial next month in Ann Arbor, Mich. Both men already face prison sentences and millions of dollars of court-ordered financial restitution from their state convictions in Home State's 1985 collapse.

"I think it's very important to the United States' case," Crites told a news conference. "While it is beneficial, it certainly wasn't imperative that we have his testimony."

Crites said Bongard and his attorneys offered the plea bargain after Bongard's conviction last month in Hamilton County Common Pleas Court in Cincinnati. Bongard is appealing that conviction, which brought a 10-year jail sentence and an order to make $114 million in restitution.

Crites said the government is ready to prosecute Warner next month. He said there has been no move to arrange a similar agreement with Warner.

"I'VE HAD no discussion with Mr. Warner or his attorneys," Crites said.

Under the agreement, Bongard will plead guilty to four counts of his 16-count federal indictment and cooperate with the government. The four counts carry a maximum 20-year prison term and $253,000 fine.

The government will recommend a sentence for Bongard, based on the degree of cooperation, Crites said. He said the judge would have the option of giving Bongard a sentence to be served concurrent with his state time.

The federal indictment charged Bongard, 45, with conspiracy, 13 counts of wire fraud, and two counts of interstate movement of fraudulently obtained funds. He agreed to plead to the conspiracy and three counts of wire fraud, prosecutors said. The other counts will be dropped.

Bongard is scheduled to enter his plea Monday in U.S. District Court in Cincinnati before Judge Charles Joiner, who has the option of accepting or rejecting it. Bongard and his attorneys already have signed the agreement to cooperate in prosecuting Warner, but it could be withdrawn if Joiner rejects the agreement or if Bongard changes his mind and decides to stand trial.

Physicists challenge SDI plans

Experts say scheduled 1994 'Star Wars' deployment 'a gamble'

WASHINGTON (AP) - Challenging Reagan administration assumptions about "Star Wars," a group of top American physicists said yesterday that at least a decade of research is needed to determine whether high-energy lasers and particle beams can be used to knock down enemy missiles in space.

In a 422-page technical study, 17 members of the American Physical Society delivered the sharpest scientific challenge yet to administration plans to deploy space- and ground-based ballistic missile defenses as early as 1994.

"On purely scientific and engineering criteria, one would not make a decision on early deployment. But in the international arena, there are other forces," said Kumar Patel, a physicist at AT&T Bell Laboratories and co-chairman of the study group.

Another author, Jeremiah Sullivan of the University of Illinois at Urbana, said deployment in the early or mid-1990s would be "a gamble."

"Even in the best of circumstances, a decade or more of intensive research would be required just to provide the technical knowledge needed for an informed decision about the potential effectiveness and survivability" of lasers and other "directed energy weapons," the report said.

A PENTAGON critique said the report's conclusions were "subjective and unduly pessimistic about our capability to bring to fruition the specific technologies needed for a full-scale development decision in the 1990s."

But Patel and others rejected that view at a news conference.

"In spite of the progress that has been made, a substantial amount of research remains to be done before an informed judgment can be made about the effectiveness and the reliability and survivability of such weapons if and when they are deployed," Patel said.

The Pentagon's Strategic Defense Initiative Organization, which directs Star Wars research, said in a statement that recent breakthroughs have brought some high-energy devices closer to the weapons stage.

The report played an immediate role in congressional debate on President Reagan's request to spend $5.8 billion next year on Star Wars.

Members of a Senate Appropriations subcommittee raised it in a closed session yesterday with the head of the SDI Office, Air Force Lt. Gen. James Abrahamson, said one congressional source, who declined to be identified.

THE AUTHORS of the report, "many of whom have important roles in developing those technologies," received classified briefings from Defense Department officials, Patel said.

Panel hears radon testimony

WASHINGTON (AP) - Several homeowners described their battle against the invasion of radon to a House panel yesterday and indicated that Americans fail to appreciate the risk posed by the cancer-causing gas.

Jay Massaro told the House Energy and Commerce hazardous materials subcommittee he discovered high levels of radon gas in his Centerville, Ohio, home following a study by a local air pollution agency.

Massaro said the tests indicated that radon levels in his basement were as high as 48 picocuries per liter, or the equivalent of smoking more than two packs of cigarettes a day.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency recommends remedial action if radon levels exceed 4 picocuries.

Massaro said he had not known that the area had a radon problem and felt that his family was in danger.

"It was particularly upsetting," Massaro said. "Our children had spent long hours playing in the basement in the winter."

Attracting attention only in recent years, radon is a colorless, odorless radioactive gas produced by the decay of natural uranium deposits. It can seep through cracks in homes and other buildings, often becoming trapped and accumulating to dangerous levels.

MARK HUBBARD, of Mount Airy, Md., told the subcommittee that radon levels of as much as 120 picocuries were detected in his basement after he decided to conduct tests himself before remodeling.

"I was very shocked, surprised, scared," said Hubbard. "I didn't know what to do, who to turn to."

Both men said they later installed ventilation systems, which reduced radon levels to below four picocuries. They also said they notified neighbors about the problem, but that some apparently chose to ignore it for fear of hurting property values.

"There are a lot of people that are ignorant of the problem of radon," said Hubbard.

Both men said they knew of families in their neighborhood who had kept dogs in their basements, and the animals had died of cancer.

"I don't think people really appreciate the risk here, especially if they have small children," said Massaro.

The EPA has estimated that as many as 20,000 people die each year from lung cancer caused by radon. And the agency has said as much as 12 percent of the nation's houses may require remedial action to prevent entry of the gas.

Third liver transplant 'perfect' for Fla. boy

PITTSBURGH (AP) - Seven-year-old Ronnie DeSillers, fighting infection, pneumonia and an inflamed pancreas, came through a third liver transplant "with flying colors" yesterday after his mother told him "you can't keep a winner down."

"With every obstacle he encounters, he just comes back stronger every time," said Sue Cardillo, a spokeswoman at Children's Hospital in Pittsburgh.

The Miami boy, whose desperate need for a liver won support from President Reagan, received the liver of an unidentified child during a 10½-hour operation yesterday.

The transplant, his second in less than three weeks, came on the heels of two operations to correct abdominal pain and internal bleeding. He was in critical condition following the latest surgery.

"It went very smoothly, and they're calling this organ a perfect fit," Cardillo said.

"He looks absolutely wonderful. His color is great," Ronnie's mother, Maria DeSillers, said yesterday. She said Ronnie looks "remarkably better" than he did after the first two transplants.

DeSillers, 31, said she learned Wednesday evening her son needed another liver. Tests showed "a lot of damage to the (second) liver, more than they had ever expected," DeSillers said.

WHEN SHE TOLD Ronnie about the the impending operation, her heavily sedated son could not speak but grabbed her hands with two fingers and cried.

"I told him he needed to be stronger than ever, that nobody could keep a winner down," she said.

Highway Patrol crackdown reminds drivers of 55 limit

DAYTON (AP) - The Ohio Highway Patrol says almost 500 motorists found out the hard way that the speed limit in Ohio still is 55 mph during a recent crackdown in the west central part of the state.

A total of 543 people were ticketed on Interstates 70 and 75 between March 30 and April 10, Lt. Larry Kobi, commander of the Dayton patrol post, said this week. Of those, 465 were for speeding, said Lt. Don Dutton, assistant commander of the patrol's District 5 at Piqua.

He said many people apparently thought that congressional approval of a 65 mph speed limit in rural areas was automatic, not realizing it has to be approved by the states. Ohio has not approved the change.

"This operation, really, was different from any other we had conducted in the past," Dutton said. "I just think a lot of people looking at the speed limit... wondered why we were insisting on 55."

However, the task force, which involved up to four cruisers and an airplane patrolling the interstates at any one time, was planned long before the congressional action, Dutton said.

Besides the speeding tickets, 64 people were ticketed for not wearing a seat belt.

Korean university students riot

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) - About 700 students hurled firebombs and stones at police yesterday in clashes at Seoul National University after a memorial service for a student who died after police torture, witnesses said.

Protests against the government also were reported at 13 other universities.

Last week there were campus protests almost every day, but intermittent rains this week seemed to cool the situation until yesterday.

There were no overall estimates of the number of protesters, but campus sources and press reports said at least 6,600 students were involved.

Witnesses said at least five students were taken away and three others injured in a three-hour clash at state-run Seoul National University that followed a memorial marking the 100th day after the death of dissident student Park Chong-chul, who died after police torture on Jan. 14.

An official investigation found that Park died after his throat was pressed against a bathtub during a police interrogation.

'Dead Head' concert on ballot

TELLURIDE, Colo. (AP) - The "Dead Head" issue is going to the voters with die-hard Grateful Dead fans politely campaigning to bring their favorite rock group to this mountain hamlet.

Rock impresario Bill Graham, who owns a home in Telluride, wants to hold the concert in August. Opponents say this town of 1,200 cannot handle more than 10,000 concertgoers, including hordes of "Dead Heads" - those who make a hobby of following the 1960s band.

"The issue is really more whether the town needs another big festival," said Carole Chown, who organized an opposition petition drive. She said bluegrass and jazz festivals held each year attract a maximum of 8,000 visitors.

After a standing-room-only town meeting Tuesday, the town board decided to let voters decide May 22 whether to permit the concert.

McEwen files for Senate bid

WASHINGTON (AP) - Rep. Bob McEwen, R-Ohio, filed a statement of candidacy and organization yesterday with the Federal Election Commission as part of his expected bid for the U.S. Senate.

The seat is currently held by Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio.

The filing does not mean that McEwen has officially announced his candidacy, but rather that he is legally a candidate in the eyes of the FEC.

"They are the first official steps taken by the congressman," said Charles Greener, McEwen's administrative assistant. "We anticipate... announcing sometime late spring or early summer."

The brief statements designated the campaign committee as McEwen '88 and indicated it would be based in Hillsboro, Ohio. James Caldwell was listed as treasurer.

Building collapses, kills 10

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (AP) - A downtown apartment building under construction collapsed yesterday, trapping up to 40 workers under tons of concrete, killing at least ten people and injuring 12 others, authorities said.

Police Superintendent Joseph Walsh estimated it could take a week or more to clear the rubble and find all the victims.

He said about 40 workers were believed trapped when stacks of concrete flooring and steel beams collapsed at the L'Ambiance Plaza project at about 1:30 p.m.

Rescue workers "have to lift the rubble before they can actually work," Walsh said. "The state police have their dogs here. We have sounding devices. We have everything. But it's a question of taking time."

Wayne State fell faltering Falcons

Bowling Green senior Tim Hatem dives safely into second base during yesterday's loss to Wayne State.

BG News/Rob Upton

by Matt Winkeljohn
assistant sports editor

It's the little things that have a nastiest habit of messing things up. The Bowling Green baseball team is familiar with this axiom. After dropping a doubleheader at the University of Toledo Wednesday, the Falcons fell, 10-6, at home yesterday to the Wayne State Tartars.

Three errors, a passed ball, a wild pitch, seven walks issued, 13 hits surrendered, and at least a couple bobbled balls that did not go as errors cost the Falcons dearly. Head coach Ed Platzer said he had no idea his team was about to play as poorly as it did.

"I didn't think before the game there would be a problem. We appeared to be ready to play. We had a good round of batting practice, and a good infield exercise before the game," Platzer said. "That's not what happened in the game."

Both teams scored a run in the first inning yesterday before the Tartars parlayed a Richard Norris wild pitch into a run on the power of centerfielder Brad Silverstein's double. A single off the bat of Ken Berezinski then picked up Silverstein.

BG scored a run in the bottom of the frame to draw within one, but the Falcons drew no closer as Norris was on his way to losing his first decision of the year and the BG was seven innings away from falling to 13-19.

Wayne State head coach Angelo Gust said it was nice to see the shoe on the other foot.

"Hey, we've found ways to lose games all year. I'm used to seeing these things slip away. I'm glad our regular third baseman had to stay at school and take exams," Gust said. "You talk about cringing when a ball is hit in the infield. It's nice to finally win one against one of these Division I schools."

Wayne State, a Division II program, now has a 1-5 record against Division I teams. The Tartars are 19-13 overall.

Not everyone with Bowling Green ties was unhappy with yesterday's results. Tartar assistant coach Rich Korkizko, a former graduate assistant at BG, was pleased to see the Falcons send five pitchers to the mound.

"It's nice to come back here and play well. Last year, we didn't play at our place, they beat us 11-3."

Offensively, shortstop Tim Hatem had a triple and a pair of RBI's in the Falcons' three-run ninth inning. Also, Matt Oestrike and Kevin Ward had two hits apiece.

The Falcons host league-leading Central Michigan in a pair of doubleheaders this weekend.

Bon Voyage!

BG faces Chippewas

Let's be honest. Things just don't look too promising for the Bowling Green's baseball team as they head into this weekend's matchup with Central Michigan.

The Falcons are at or near the bottom of every category in the Mid-American Conference. BG owns a 13-18 overall mark. Meanwhile, the Chippewas are at or near the top of every conference category. CMU is also 19-7 and 7-3 in the conference and the defending MAC champs - BG finished sixth in 1986.

The BG-CMU four-game series will begin Saturday with a doubleheader beginning at 1 p.m. Sunday, BG and CMU will play another twinbill set to start at 1 p.m.

Statistics don't win games, but they sure do look impressive - at least for the Chips.

After 26 games, the Chips are second in the MAC in team batting average by hitting at a .292 clip. BG, on the other hand is last in the same category with a .234 average.

The Falcons are no offensive machine, but defense doesn't appear to be their strong suit either.

BG owns the conference's lowest fielding percentage.

They have made 74 errors thus far for a .929 fielding average. CMU is second in the MAC with only 35 errors and a .957 fielding percentage.

But the Falcons' woes don't stop there.

Pitching has been another sore spot for BG. They are seventh in the conference in earned run average with 5.14 ERA. The Chips, on the other hand, have the MAC's lowest ERA at 2.99.

Despite these stats which tilt the scales heavily in the Chips favor, BG has won four conference games. It may not be the prettiest team on paper, but the Falcons do find ways to win.

That's all that matters. Last year, CMU defeated BG in three of four meetings. BG won a 9-8 decision, but lost 7-0, 8-1, and 5-1 to the Chips.

CMU is nothing less than a powerhouse in the MAC these days. They are coming off a 43-16 season (25-6 in the conference) and are shooting for their fourth straight conference crown under head coach Dean Kreiner.

Kreiner, in his third year at CMU, owns a 100-42-2 record. He was also chosen MAC Coach of the Year and Mid-east Coach of the Year the past two seasons.

BG, on the other hand, has dwelled in obscurity. The Falcons have won only one conference championship (1972) in the 41-year history of the MAC.

Leading the Falcons offensively this season are first baseman Greg Lashuk who is hitting .315 and designated hitter Ken Ospelt (.293). Lashuk also has ateam-leading 15 RBIs. Teammate Joe Mueller leads BG in home runs with four.

The Chips boast the talents of designate hitter Mike Weatherly who leads the MAC in hitting with a .450 batting average. He also leads the team with 16 RBIs. Shortstop Kip Southland is hitting at a .378 clip while third baseman Mitch Bohn has a .335 batting average.

As a team, CMU has hit 21 home runs with eight players with at least two round-trippers apiece.

The pitching of CMU is also quite solid. Doug Noch (3-1) and Dan Rambo (3-3) are ranked second and third respectively in the MAC with ERAs of 1.14 and 1.41. The Chips' Tim McDonald is second in the conference with a 4-1 record. He also owns a 3.28 ERA.

Buckeye star receiver Carter gets suspension

COLUMBUS (AP) - A day after suspending All-America wide receiver Cris Carter from the Ohio State football team, Buckeye coach Earle Bruce said he was sorry to have to take such a step but felt it was necessary.

"What can I say? I'm disappointed that it happened; I'm sorry it happened. I hope that everything is worked out, corrected, and we get on with it," Bruce said Thursday prior to his team's spring practice session.

Carter, who will be a senior this fall, was unavailable for comment.

On Wednesday, Bruce disclosed the suspension of Carter, the leading receiver in Ohio State history, citing "a violation of team rules."

Bruce, beginning his ninth season as head coach at Ohio State, declined to detail the reasons for the suspension when confronted by reporters at his Biggs Facility coaching office.

"I think that's personal," Bruce said.

Butch Carter, an older brother of the Ohio State split end, said on Wednesday that Cris was being suspended because of his relationship with another brother, George, who works for an agent, Norby Walters of World Sports & Entertainment, Inc. National Collegiate Athletic Association rules forbid underclassmen from signing contracts with or accepting money from player agents.

Butch Carter said that Bruce suspended Cris Carter because "he does not want him associating with George on the campus and he wants George to stay away from the other Ohio State players."

While refusing to comment on the reasons behind the suspension, Bruce said, "Right now, if you violate team rules, you've got to pay the penalty. He's got to pay the penalty like anybody else."

Carter, a 6-foot-3, 194-pounder, caught a school record 69 passes last season for 1,127 yards and 11 touchdowns, all Ohio State records. He also owns Buckeye career marks with 168 receptions and 27 touchdowns. He needs just 68 yards to become the leading OSU career receiver in terms of yardage.

Although it had been reported Wednesday that Carter had been suspended for the remainder of Ohio State's spring practices, Bruce said Thursday that he had not decided how long the suspension would last.

"I haven't looked at that yet," he said. "It (will end) when it's worked out. Obviously I didn't give much thought to that. Whatever seems to solve the problem ..."

Cris Carter had been under investigation by the NCAA after reports that he had already signed a contract with World Sports & Entertainment.

But Carter denied that and a subsequent investigation by the Ohio State athletic department cleared him of any wrongdoing.

"(The suspension) has got something to do with (the alleged relationship between Walters and Cris Carter)," said Butch Carter, a former Indiana University and National Basketball Association player, currently the head coach at the Carters' alma mater, Middletown High School. "We have a brother (George) who might have been involved (with Walters) in some way."

Asked if the suspension could be the end of Cris Carter's college career, Bruce said, "I don't know about that. I think that any suspension from a football team is serious business. I'm concerned about it. I hope that the thing can be worked out to the satisfaction of all."

Ohio State concludes spring practice May 2.

Team unhittable

ANSONIA (AP) - Can National Trail High School make it four in a row?

Friday night at Camden Preble Shawnee, the Blazers will go for their fourth straight no-hitter.

Wednesday, for the third straight game, a New Paris National Trail pitcher threw a no-hitter. Jeff Pennington, who began the streak with a no-hitter a week ago Monday, stopped Ansonia 16-0 as the Blazers improved to 5-0 on the season.

Pennington no-hit Union City Mississinawa Valley in a 19-1 victory and Todd Pittman no-hit Pleasant Hill Newton Monday in a 21-0 win.

Pennington, a senior, was close to perfection, giving up just one walk while striking out 13. The Blazers made two errors.

Trail also swung the bat well Wednesday, pounding out 14 hits. Pittman was 3 for 3 with two home runs, a triple and three RBI; Todd Snyder had a double, two singles and two RBI; Pennington two hits and Mark Bane a two-run double.

In the Monday no-hitter, Pittman struck out 20 batters. After retiring the first Newton batter on a ground ball, Pittman struck out the next 18 he faced.

His perfect game was broken by an error and walk in the seventh. Pittman then struck out the last two batters.

Pittman, a senior, is the brother of Park Pittman, a former Ohio State pitching star.

Bethea found dead

HAMPTON, Va. (AP) - Larry Bethea, a former first-round draft choice of the Dallas Cowboys, has died of a gunshot wound to the head, a Hampton General Hospital official said today.

Bethea, a defensive lineman for the Cowboys from 1978-83, was pronounced dead on arrival at the hospital at 2 a.m. EDT, the official said.

Police did not immediately release any information on Bethea.

Bethea was chosen out of Michigan State by the Cowboys as the 28th overall selection of the 1978 NFL draft. He left the Cowboys and signed a contract with the USFL in 1984, playing for Michigan. His final season, 1985, also was spent in the USFL with Oakland and Houston.

Bethea lettered at Michigan State from 1974-77. In his senior season, he won the Governor of Michigan award as the most valuable Spartan.

He played in the East-West Shrine game and the Challenge Bowl following his final collegiate season.

Prior to enrolling at Michigan State, Bethea starred for Ferguson High School in nearby Newport News.

DEATH NOTICE
FISCHER
Ryan Keith Fischer, ageless wonder of Willowick, beloved son of a b---, real son of George and Sandra Fischer (but they won't admit it), devoted brother of Randy (who also won't admit it unless he's getting money in the will), and just a general brother to Jay, Craig, and Jeff, father of many unknown illegitimate across this great land. Cause of Death: While being attacked by eleven year olds who mistook him for Emmanuel Lewis, he was struck a blow on the top of his head by a three foot Pigmy who cowed him... who cares as long as he's dead! So we can party.
Roommates and neighbors (Decrepit bunch they are) will receive friends, hostile enemies, and any gorgeous females wishing to come along, at the SWAMP, aka 324 Bromfield, on April 25, 1987 at 7:30 pm. Services will be held at 8:30 pm, resurrection will be three minutes later (party to ensue afterwards). Roommate suggests contributions in honor of Ryan to be made to his wallet.

Friday interviews by Denelle Jones

What's your favorite summer activity?

Jennifer Nowlin, grad student public administration major from Florence, South Carolina, "Going to the park. It relaxes you and you can get away from your worries."

Robyn Rau, senior family services major from Huron, "I like to play Frisbee in the park. It's good exercise and a good way to meet people."

Shayne Bounton, junior political science major from Uma, "Just being with my friends. All my friends are in school and the summer is a good time to see them."

Mark Hanson, sophomore education major from Toledo, "Playing basketball outside. It's a good way to work on a suntan."

All University colleges to offer summer programs

by Donna Scenna
Friday reporter

Normally about 7,500 students enroll in the summer program, according to the director of continuing education.

Judy Donald said the University summer school program consists of courses offered by all six undergraduate colleges: Arts and Sciences, Business Administration, Education, Health and Human Services, Musical Arts, and Technology — as well as the Graduate College.

Donald said, "There will be nine terms offered this summer, with some of the sessions overlapping each other in order to get all the terms in."

The schedule includes four five-week, three eight-week and two ten-week sessions beginning May 18 and ending Aug. 14, she said.

Sue Abbott, senior fashion merchandising major, said, "I think summer school is something that everyone should experience at least once."

She said there is a relaxed atmosphere in summer classes, which enables students to get individual attention from professors. "You can get a class over within five weeks rather than 15 weeks," Abbott said.

The maximum amount of hours undergraduate students can take for the entire summer is 18 hours, while graduate students can only take 12 hours, according to Donald.

Carole Schuler, senior art therapy major, said, "I recommend going to summer school. Everyone should go at least once. It's a different aspect of the University you don't get to see during the regular school year."

Chrissy Posewitz, senior elementary education and LBD major agrees, "It's a very easygoing and laidback atmosphere. You get to meet a lot more people because of the decreased number of students attending the University in the summer."

She said the social life in the summer is different from the regular session because more activities are outdoors, such as spending the day at the Portage Quarry, going to drive-ins and having dinner and drinks on the patio at Sundance.

"It offers me a chance to meet more people and to invest my money in Sundance," said Bill Stambaugh, senior advertising major.

Health and fitness goal of Rec program

by Deanna Griffith
Friday staff reporter

This summer, the Student Recreation Center will be hosting its seventh annual Youth Fun and Fitness Days Program. According to Tamra Summers, assistant director for the program, "this year's program will be more fitness-oriented."

The Youth Fun and Fitness Days Program was created when the Rec Center was opened for faculty use. It was decided to open the center to faculty children through the Fitness Days Program.

According to Summers, "the goals of the program are health, fitness and to help explain to the children what goes on at the University."

This year Summers hopes to "get away from the day camp concept to a health, fun and fitness concept."

The hours of the program are 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. The first hour is devoted to exploring the University. This may include visits to the library, the planetarium or the art department.

The second hour, according to a brochure about the program, "will encompass education about or participation in a health or fitness activity." Some of these activities may include trips to the fitness trail, Home Economics building for nutrition or children's aerobics.

The third hour is reserved for swimming. This may include water sports or water aerobics.

The program is open to children of faculty members, and is available to community children if space allows the week before the session begins.

The program is open to children in first through sixth grades. The first session will be from June 22 through July 9, and the second session runs from July 20 through August 6. Grades 1-3 attend on different days than grades 4-6.

Summers said that "in the past it has been a place for children to get dropped off. This year we're changing this idea. We're gearing the program toward the children getting to know about the health, nutrition and their bodies."

Construction is a hardhat job

by Karin Nevius
Friday reporter

After working for 12 hours in the hot sun, all Karen Darr wants to do is take a shower, go to bed early and prepare to rise early the next morning for another day of hard work with the construction companies around Fremont, Ohio.

Darr, junior family services major, is anticipating her fourth summer working for the road crews.

"I've worked as a watchman, driven a state truck on the turnpike, flagged cars and been a laborer. Wherever they need help, the union sends me over," she said. Darr's usual schedule is working from 7 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. on weekdays and she frequently works one day on the weekend. "It doesn't leave much free time, but the money's worth it," she said.

Darr heard about the job through her father, who is a foreman for one of the crews. She telephoned another foreman and found out that she had to join the union before any training could begin.

Her first job was as a watchman and she worked the midnight to 7 a.m. shift. "I had days off, but I slept mostly. I came home at 7 and slept until 3," said Darr.

Her job consisted of driving a prescribed route every hour to check for trouble. "I liked driving the truck," she said. "They'd give me the route to cover and I could be on my own."

She was switched to other jobs as necessity required. Her job last summer included changing the batteries on the flashing arrow boards, replacing the barrels on the road and flagging traffic.

"You move around on jobs. You might be doing three different jobs in different companies," she explained.

Darr said that the individual crews made the difference in how much she liked the different jobs. "The guys on the crew last year were funny. They didn't treat me any differently because I was a girl or (act) like I couldn't handle the job," she said.

Being the only girl on the crew motivated her to work harder to prove her worth on the crew. "I didn't want to be the one to drag the crew down. If one person can't do the job, then the reputation of the whole crew suffers. I always want to do a good job," said Darr.

Dressed in her ever-present hardhat and jeans, Darr comes home smelling of diesel fuel after working overtime hours fueling up the road equipment.

"I work long hours. You know you're getting paid a lot and you also know that you deserve that money," she said. Her summer wages help her pay University bills.

"It bothers me watching my friends going out during the days when I'm working or sleeping, but it's more important for me to have a good job in the summer. My turn to have fun is during the school year."

This summer will find Darr on the roads again, working hard and sacrificing her social life for union wages.

"I do like the job," she said. "When I'm through working, I'm tired but I know that I've worked hard and earned a good day's wages."

Polkafests: swinging summer events

In the 1830s, this form of music and dance was considered dangerous for the youth and condemned by the church elders of European society. Since this is too early for rock and roll, it must be: The Polka!

The polka began as a Bohemian round dance and gained popularity in the later 1800s in Vienna, London and Paris. It arrived in America with the Polish and Eastern European immigrants in the latter part of the 19th century.

Records were recorded in the 1920s, and Frank Yankovic won a Grammy for his 1985 album, "70 Years of Hits." In a New York Times article published January 25, 1987, the polka is described as a thriving nationwide dance craze.

Ohio itself is included in the Polka Belt, which originates in New England and spreads to the upper Midwestern states. The Wisconsin, Michigan, Pennsylvania and Ohio territory hops and spins to Ukrainian, Yugoslavian, Scandinavian and Italian varieties of polkas.

Hit polka tunes include "In Heaven There Is No Beer," "Pennsylvania Polka" and the ever-popular "Beer Barrel Polka." This last polka, incidentally, was the first polka to spread the music beyond ethnic circles into the public spotlight, according to the New York Times.

The newest innovation in polka mania is "new music." The Times article explained that accordionist and composer Guy Klucsevsek is creating an avant-garde project called "Polka From the Fringe" which includes new polka compositions from "new music" artists.

Locally, annual Polkafests are celebrated by hundreds of people and radio stations offer solid hours of polkas. Napoleon holds a Polkafest every summer.

Polka albums are available in record stores, and dance clubs gather regularly to dance to the boisterous music. An exercise video is even available to melt those pounds down through vigorous polka-ing.

Chilling out eating ice cream

by Kelly Vaughn
Friday reporter

I scream, you scream, we all scream for ice cream.

Students often scream for ice cream during the summer months, especially on hot and humid days. They have their choice of buying hard or soft ice cream with natural or artificial flavors from a store or from the home ice cream maker. There are many places to find ice cream when the need to cool off is present: grocery stores, family reunions, birthday parties, restaurants, dairy aisles and ice cream specialty shops.

New uses for ice cream are being developed all the time. It is used in desserts, pies, milkshakes, after-dinner drinks and cakes. It is eaten on a cone, in a dish, straight from the carton or in a rich, gooey sundae.

Junior computer science major Martin Loveless has eaten ice cream with potato chips, and with root beer schnapps to make a more potent root beer float. His favorite way to have ice cream is in a Blizzard from Dairy Queen. He gets vanilla ice cream with a chopped Heath Bar stirred in.

"Vanilla ice cream is my favorite. I use the Blizzard to reward myself once in a while," Loveless said.

Baskin Robbins is known for its 31 flavors. Other places seem to be increasing their selection, too. The flavors range from bubble gum to peanut butter and chocolate to mint oreo to butter pecan and pina colada.

To add to the flavors are toppings that complement the ice cream. Hot fudge and caramel are old standbys, but peanut butter is gaining in popularity.

Montina Forman, junior sociology major, said, "I love any ice cream that has chocolate in it, but I won't eat it if it doesn't have any. My favorite flavor is chocolate fudge brownie nut from Baskin Robbins." Forman and two of her friends ate a sundae one afternoon with seven kinds of ice cream and chocolate, hot fudge, strawberry and peanut butter toppings on it.

The reasons, or excuses, for eating ice cream keep expanding, also. Linda Lloyd, junior elementary education major, had the same reason for treating herself for several years when she was younger. "When I was in grade school, my dad used to take me, my sisters and all the neighbor kids out for ice cream the day before school started to end the summer on a cool note," said Lloyd.

Forman also ate ice cream with her father in the summer. "When I was eight, Dad and I used to go to Dairy Queen every night after all the chores were done," she said.

Being with family members is always a popular reason to indulge in ice cream. "I smashed my brother's nose in a cone once because he tried to lick my cone," said Jeff Wallace, junior accounting major. Wallace eats ice cream after his evening classes because "It is cool and refreshing and it is good for me."

Ice cream can be bought in many shapes, forms and quantities. Cartons come in pints, quarts and half-gallons, so the uneaten portion can be saved for a later day. But not everyone saves it for another time. Tim Wilhelm, junior elementary education major, said, "I ate a whole half-gallon of black cherry ice cream in one day a couple years ago. I couldn't stop thinking about it until it was gone, so I kept going back and eating more."

Frozen yogurt is cropping up as an ice cream substitute for those with a weight-conscious sweet tooth. Lloyd gets it after lying in the sun before she goes in to watch "General Hospital." "I like it better than ice cream. TCBY is the greatest. I go there every day in the summer. I eat it because it tastes good and it cools me off. It also saves me from having to cook a big meal," Lloyd said.

This summer will be the perfect opportunity to try all the new ice cream flavors that have been introduced in the last few months. Whether it is homemade, soft, hard or drowning in hot fudge, ice cream is a great way to cool off in the summer.

Island draws tourists, workers

by Keith Cornelius
Friday reporter

Billboards throughout Northwest Ohio encourage travelers to "Put an Island in Your Life" by visiting Put-In-Bay.

Not an island itself, Put-In-Bay is a town located on the north bay of South Bass Island, the southernmost Lake Erie island. The town is composed mostly of the island's tourist attractions. The eastern and southwestern areas of the island are residential.

The main tourist season lasts from Memorial Day to Labor Day, according to Lisa Lattimore, junior public relations major. Lattimore has worked and lived on the island for the past two summers. One summer she worked in a gift shop and the other was spent in a local restaurant, The Crescent Tavern.

"It's a great place to work. The pay is good and our housing was provided," Lattimore said. The area has many seasonal positions available and attracts a large population of college-age employees.

There is plenty to do on the island, including tours of wineries and island caves, Lattimore said.

Lattimore recommends a trip to the top of Perry's Victory Monument, a tall granite monument dedicated to Commodore Oliver Hazard Perry, who stationed troops on the island during battles on Lake Erie. The view of the surrounding Lake Erie Islands is breathtaking on a clear day, she said.

A wide variety of gift shops and restaurants offer something for every taste. Shops sell everything from kites and Viking sweaters to T-shirts and nautical souvenirs. Restaurant menus include cuisine from barbecued chicken and ice cream to steak and seafood.

Although there is plenty for the one-day visitor, Lattimore said, "The island's more fun at night." Overnight guests stay at one of the two hotels, campgrounds or in one of the rental cottages on the island. Boat owners often sleep onboard their boats which they dock in the large public marina near the downtown area.

Lattimore recommends making overnight reservations in advance since "they can't let people sleep in the park anymore." During the season, vacancies fill rapidly.

One of the most exciting events of the summer is the regatta, a two-week festival of sail and power boat activities, said Lattimore. "The whole island is a zoo during the regatta." Boats come from all over to participate.

Boats anchor all around the island. "They are all tied up together and it's like a huge party," said Lattimore. During the day there are races and other activities planned.

Except for regatta weeks, weekdays are fairly quiet on the island, said Lattimore. Fridays and Saturdays are the busiest days when people head for the island by ferry, private boat or plane. Yes, there is an airport on the island.

Two ferry boats service the island. One leaves from Port Clinton and the other from Catawba Island. The Goodtime II transports passengers from Sandusky.

On Sundays and Mondays, the Arawanna Queen takes guests from Toledo to Put-In-Bay, offering a glimpse of what the pleasure cruise was like at the turn of the century. The Arawanna Queen provides meals, live entertainment and "cruise ship" hospitality.

Once on the island, many visitors travel around on bicycles, said Lattimore. Businesses rent bikes, mopeds and golf carts by the hour or by the day. Some people prefer to walk since the island is not very large.

Put-In-Bay's attractions include miniature golf, waterskiing and relaxing with a cold beer — the makings for a good mini-vacation for all ages.

Formals provide opportunities for dining, dancing

by Donna Scenna
and Amy Kizer

Throughout the year there are opportunities for students to dress up for an evening of dining and dancing.

Various campus organizations and residence halls sponsor formals throughout the year. They range from an evening in Bowling Green to an elaborate event held at a posh downtown hotel.

"Formals are a nice change of pace. They are different from typical date parties," said Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity member Pete Potenzini, junior sport management major.

Mike Moyer, a member of Phi Kappa Psi and junior social work major, agreed. "It's nice to get away from campus and see everyone dressed up. It also gives us a chance to spend time with that special someone," he said.

Alpha Chi Omega's Anne Connor, a senior broadcast journalism major, explained, "It's tons of fun to get all dressed up, have dinner and dance with the people in your house."

Formals are commonly held around Christmas and during the spring. However, many of the fraternities hold their formals in conjunction with Homecoming.

Chip Thomson, a junior photojournalism major, is a member of one of these houses, Kappa Sigma. "One reason I look forward to formal is because it brings back past memories of good times. The alums come back and you get to see people you haven't seen in a long time. You're with the people you want to be with," he said.

Many organizations have a special committee that organizes and plans the event. "We have a formal committee and anyone can be on that committee. My chapter votes on the best possible date and price range so it's not just the committee making the final decision," said Phi Mu sorority member Nancy Glanville, senior elementary education major.

Favors, such as fluted champagne glasses, T-shirts or picture frames, are often given as a remembrance of the evening. In addition, a photographer is usually present and pictures can be ordered with the event's name and date printed on it.

Cruising tips make 'cool' trips

by Amy Kizer
Friday reporter

It's the time to take to the road — it's the time to go cruising.

But before starting, carefully consider each element of cruising.

Most important, of course, is the car — without it, you'd be walking, which wouldn't be cool. Also, make sure your car is in good working condition. It's definitely not cool to fix a flat while everyone else is driving by.

The company you're with is also important. Consider your motives before choosing whom to take along.

If you're looking for a Friday night date, keep the car occupants limited to one sex and spend your time together looking for the other.

Cruising, however, is also a great way to spend time with one person of the opposite sex while looking for the perfect picnic spot.

Where you cruise is also a factor. One goal is to be seen, so choose your route carefully.

Some locations are better than others. Parking lots aren't much good, but any main street or anywhere near a lake or river is usually a good bet.

Certain towns are also more conducive to cruising than others.

As Chip Thomson, junior photojournalism major, said, "To cruise in BG is like picking corn in a cornfield — it's boring."

He explained, "No matter where you go cruising, however, you need good music, a fast car, and you've got to have sunglasses."

Julie Gecowets, junior medical technology major, agreed music is a must, and added, "Summer is the best time to go cruising because you can roll down the windows. You go out about 10 o'clock at night with a bunch of friends looking for things to do and seeing who's out."

"You have to have a convertible — even though I don't have one," explained Steve Honingford, senior public relations major. "A warm breeze and nice starry night are also a necessity," he said.

Colleen Boldt, freshman international business major, was even more specific in her car choice. "It has to be a red convertible. You also need great weather and a cooler full of food and drinks," she said.

"The idea is to look for gorgeous men — don't look for anything else." Men, of course, can break this last rule and insert "women" after the word "gorgeous."

There is one more thing you should remember. At no time should you drive with both hands on the wheel like you did when you were in driver education. It's imperative to look relaxed.

Finally, here's a simple checklist to follow the next time you go cruising.

Remember:

1. The car
 2. The shades
 3. The music
 4. The food
 5. The friends, and
 6. A sense of adventure
- Leave behind
1. The map
 2. Your parents
 3. Any younger brothers or sisters, and
 4. Anyone who is much better looking than yourself.

"Cosby" and "Family Ties" tie up top spots

NEW YORK (AP) — It was the year of the sitcom as "The Cosby Show" and "Family Ties" helped carry NBC to its second straight season as king of the ratings, while CBS suffered its lowest season average ever.

"Cosby," the highest-rated prime-time program for the second season in a row, and "Ties," No. 2 for the second-consecutive season, also became the two most-watched series in history, the A.C. Nielsen Co. said Tuesday.

In the season ending April 19, situation comedies had the highest three-network average rating — 18.2 — of all program types. Sitcoms made up 18 percent of the networks' schedules this year, up from 15 percent last year.

Action-adventure series take up the most room on the schedule, 24 percent, but had an average rating of 14.3, lower than news-information shows, which had an average rating of 14.6.

The rating is a percentage of the nation's estimated 87.4 million homes with televisions.

According to the A.C. Nielsen Co., NBC won the season with an average, prime-time rating of 17.8. CBS' average was 15.8 and ABC's 14.1. That was a 1 percent increase for NBC from last season, when it averaged 17.5.

CBS and ABC were down 5 percent each and NBC, which was in third place only four years ago, beat second-place CBS by even more this year than last, when CBS had an average rating of 16.7 and ABC 14.9.

It was CBS' lowest season-average rating ever and ABC's lowest since 1954.

NBC Entertainment President Brandon Tartikoff, in a telephone news conference from Burbank, Calif., was already looking toward next season.

"Going into next year, we're going to be highly selective in what we'll add to the mix in terms of situation comedies," he said.

Though NBC finished the season winning three nights — Monday, Thursday and Saturday, Thursday night was the key. NBC won it with an average 12.5 rating point lead over its nearest competitor, CBS.

The lowest-rated, regularly scheduled series included: "Sidekicks," "Starman" and "Twilight Zone."

Critic's Corner

by Mark A. Zimmerman
Friday staff reporter

Bruce Willis' motion picture debut is not just any debut. He plays the macho/cool David Addison on "Moonlighting," and the question now is whether or not he can take his charm and charisma to the big screen.

In Blake Edwards' film, "Blind Date," Willis does just that. He plays the career-oriented Walter Davis who needs a date for a very important business dinner.

He agrees to take Nadia Gates (Kim Basinger) as a blind date. He is given one warning: Don't get her drunk. It seems that Gates loses control while under the influence of alcohol.

At first appearance, Nadia seems like the perfect blind date. She's young, intelligent and attractive. She and Walter hit it off well, and both are expecting a pleasant evening.

At an art exhibit, they run into her psychotic and overly jealous ex-boyfriend, David Bedford (played by John Larroquette). He makes it perfectly clear that he still loves Gates and is concerned about the context of her relationship with Davis.

Walter and Nadia continue the evening with a few glasses of champagne in a cozy recording studio. The evening is all downhill from there.

At the restaurant, Nadia insults the guest of honor and convinces his wife to sue for divorce. As a result, Walter is fired. David shows up and picks a fight with Walter, causing everyone to be thrown out of the restaurant.

Each time Nadia appears to get everything under control, she finds something else to drink. Walter ends the night in jail for attempting to shoot David while in the parking lot of a high-society party.

If the movie had ended there, it would be a very short, one-gag film. It does not end there. Blake Edwards has always had a flair for taking a seemingly shallow plot and following its natural progressions.

"Blind Date"

Walter Davis (Bruce Willis) the morning after his friends fixed him up with Nadia Gates (Kim Basinger).

In "Blind Date," he continues to detail what happens the next day, when Walter has decided that he has fallen in love with Nadia.

As Walter Davis, Willis has chosen a role that is drastically different from his role in "Moonlighting." Walter is straightforward and business oriented. As such, his character is more believable.

Willis is able to carry his likability to the big screen. This movie works because the audience is able to appreciate Walter's situation and empathize with what he is feeling.

Kim Basinger gives a complete and solid performance as the Cajun Nadia Gates. Hers is an understated role that gives little room for critique. It is also easy to feel sorry for her, once you realize that she is not truly responsible for her condition.

John Larroquette also puts in a solid performance as the jilted ex-boyfriend. His is the character that holds this film together. He is unpredictable and lustful in his quest for revenge.

Perhaps the most attractive feature of this film is its subtlety. A great deal of its humor only makes you chuckle, not roll in the aisle in laughter.

My favorite scene happens on the morning after. In a rage, Walter appears in Nadia's bedroom. After he kicks and breaks the foot of the bed, he continues to berate her for her behavior the previous evening.

Her bed is lower at one end than the other and she finds herself sliding down the silk sheets and pulling herself back up the entire time he's there. This is not something one notices at first glance, yet it adds substance to an otherwise actionless scene.

Once on the day after, the movie drags a little. The manic pace of the blind date does not hold out after Walter gets out of jail.

A few of the chase scenes seem to be extraneous and overdone. Some of the twists in the story also leave some gaps in logical thinking. But these minor faults do not mar an otherwise entertaining adult comedy.

Fleetwood Mac does best work united as group

by Mark A. Zimmerman
Friday staff reporter

The current lineup of Fleetwood Mac, formed in 1975, combines the best of British blues rock and American pop. They became one of the most successful rock groups to last through the '70s.

Their first three records helped to set a standard by which a large share of subsequent albums are judged.

The second of the three albums, Rumours, also set a standard by which subsequent Fleetwood Mac records are judged.

None of the following records ever approached the heights reached easily by Rumours. The band was afraid of falling into the trap of trying too hard: Tusk was a conscious effort to avoid the trappings so skillfully utilized on the previous release.

A five-year lapse has followed the 1982 release of Mirage, an album of tracks that should have been B-sides.

Warner Brothers is calling the new record, Tango in the Night, "the second coming of Rumours." (Certain rock stations in the area are calling it the same.)

Tango in the Night contains all the same elements: Lindsey Buckingham's songs of lustful longing, Stevie Nicks' meanderings into hallucinogenic imagery and Christine McVie's basic uptempo love songs. The music is basically the same, but it doesn't traverse the years well.

Rumours was filled with the broken-hearted anguish of a band in turmoil. With two romances within the band splitting during production, the emotion was raw and powerful. The members are chums now and the music on Tango in the Night reflects it.

The content of the songs has moved from direct conflict to the remorse of a departed loved one. The emotion involved is distant and uninvolving.

A great deal of self-pity exists on this record and it all becomes a bit tiresome after a few rotations.

The members of Fleetwood Mac have always worked better within the context of the band than as solo artists. Alone, Buckingham is nervous, Nicks is self-indulgent and McVie is just plain dull.

Under each other's influence, and with the help of one of the finest rhythm sections in the business (and the band's namesake), Mick Fleetwood and John McVie, Fleetwood Mac can rock with the best.

On Tango in the Night, the differences between the principal writers is anything but subtle. When listening to the album, it becomes painfully obvious who wrote what.

Lindsey Buckingham, the unofficial leader, is the truest star of Tango. He co-produced and wrote or co-wrote seven of the album's twelve tracks.

Some of his contributions, "Caroline," "Tango in the Night" and "Family Man," pay tribute to his biggest influence: Brian Wilson. These tracks contain the same flavor as the Beach Boys' psychedelic era in the mid '60s.

On these cuts, Buckingham overlays one track with another until one can practically float aimlessly in the mix. This also holds true to a lesser extent to the other cuts on the record.

Pete Townshend once expressed his respect for Stevie Nicks. He didn't cite her incredible talent; he was referring to her ability to grow as a person and not allow it to reflect in her music.

The point is, Nicks' music today sounds as if it did 15 years ago. While that is some feat, it's also very uninteresting. Her three tracks, "Seven Wonders," "Welcome to the Room . . . Sara" and "When I See You Again," sound like outtakes from her last record.

In the last 10 years, Stevie has obviously lost an octave from the upper part of her range. This is extremely irritating on "Seven Wonders" when the melody calls for her to take the vocal into a higher register and she backs off from it instead of attacking it. It is a sad fact that a band's only soprano is outshone by the band's only male vocalist.

Christine McVie has apparently graduated into the world of synthesizers. The presence of her once soulful organ stylings is nonexistent, and even her beautiful piano numbers are now cold electric keyboard.

This is exemplified on the single "Big Love," where she is assigned to play the same synth-chord (that is often mistaken for Nicks' moaning) every measure during the refrain.

The result is distant and unexciting musical contributions from the formerly perfect Ms. McVie.

The high point of Tango in the Night is undoubtedly the coupling of Buckingham and McVie. His pessimism and her optimism make them the most ideal collaborators in the band. Their "Mystified" and "You and I, Part II" are the two most engaging cuts on the album.

The overall effect of Tango in the Night leaves the listener with mixed feelings. Nicks' tracks are dated, McVie's are lazy and Buckingham's are self-conscious.

If this record had been released in 1978, it might be considered comparable to the almighty Rumours. But too much time has passed for that. Instead, Tango in the Night is only an example of a great band with no inspiration throwing slop on the charts.
